

MAN BUN WILL GET THE CHOP

Stacy Thomas

IT'S taken hours of planning to get the outfit and hair just right, but Mark Udovitch is happy with his "rip-off" celebrity images.

The Liverpool Hospital radiation therapist has been scheming with his girlfriend Lisa McLean. Despite being done in jest, the reason behind it is serious.

"I had a patient who had breast cancer. She lost her hair after chemotherapy," he said. "She was distressed about the loss of hair, more than the surgery. It was harder for her than the mastectomy."

Mr Udovitch, 28, decided to grow his hair and donate it to a wig library. More than two years later, his luscious locks, which he normally wears in a man bun, are about to go.

But not before he has a bit of fun.

"It all started with the first photo I did — Creed singer Scott Stapp. It got more than 150 likes [on social media]," he said. "My favourite is Khal Drogo from Game of Thrones. We've still got more to come.

"If anyone donates, I'm asking them to recommend a celebrity for me to take off."

He's already raised more than $6000, all of it going to the Dry July campaign which encourages people to give up alcohol throughout July. He will be shaving his head at the end of the month fundraising for the Liverpool Cancer Therapy Centre. Details: dryjuly.com/users/mark-udovitch.

Mark Udovitch 's rendition of Khal Drogo from Game of Thrones.