Campbelltown Hospital receives a ‘wheely’ worthy donation

Campbelltown Hospital has received 14 of the latest ‘Medtel’ cardiac monitors and a new ultrasound system thanks to a $281,535 donation from the Wakeling Motor Group’s Wheels for Life Program.

Campbelltown Hospital's Coronary Care Unit Nursing Manager, Donna Lynn said patients in the unit will benefit greatly from the updated model as they’re routinely attached to a cardiac monitor that monitors their heart rhythms and vital signs.

“The new cardiac monitors are more responsive and will help staff to provide improved patient care and safety,” Ms Lynn said.

Campbelltown and Camden Hospital General Manager, Alison Derrett said she was appreciative of both present and past contributions from the motoring group.

“We are very grateful to the team at Wakelings who help us to provide the best care we can for our patients and improve the working lives of our staff by adding equipment to the hospital,” she said.

With $25 from every new and used car sold through the Wakeling Motor Group going towards additional life saving equipment, Ms Derrett said the funds have impacted many areas within the hospitals.

“Since 1997, the Wakeling Motor Group has provided Campbelltown and Camden Hospitals with over $1 million worth of medical equipment including a ventilation machine, digital weighing chair, mobile X-ray machine, digital surgical cameras and a state-of-the-art operating theatre lighting system.”

Wakeling Motor Group’s owner Paul Wakeling said by working together, we can help deliver better health outcomes for the communities they operate in.

“We’ve always based our business on supporting the community that supports us, and I can’t think of a better way of doing just that than through our local hospitals,” Mr Wakeling said.
