Call for South Western Sydney Local Health District Board nominations

South Western Sydney Local Health District is seeking nominations for its board, providing community members with the opportunity to play a leadership role in the delivery of world-class healthcare to their community.

Professor Phillip Harris AM, South Western Sydney Local Health District Board Chairman, said the role of a board member was extremely rewarding.

“Board members play a pivotal role in setting the strategic direction and accountability for managing our public hospitals and health institutions,” Prof Harris said.

“They play an integral part in representing the interests of the consumers of our health services.”

The LHD Boards consist of six to 13 members, all appointed by the Minister for Health.

The South Western Sydney Local Health District includes metropolitan and rural communities in the local government areas of Bankstown, Liverpool, Fairfield, Campbelltown, Camden, Wollondilly and Wingecarribee.

“Board members will need to be knowledgeable about our LHD, its affairs and the environment in which it operates,” Prof Harris said.

The selection criteria ensures board members have an appropriate mix of skills, experience and expertise to oversee and provide guidance to large and complex organisations.

Applications close on Friday 25 May 2018.
